NEW SAXTON DAYLILIES for 1958

Chocolate Soldier. 36" M. Dec. $10.00

Large broad-petaled flower of chocolate-red. The mahogany petals fade to deep tan while the garnet sepals remain deep toned, giving a reverse-bicolor effect. The golden throat is greenish deep down. An unusual and showy flower.

Gold Emblem. 42" M. Dec. $15.00

Very large light gold self of Medallion form. Petals 2" or more in width, overlapping. Stays open late into the night. Fragrant. Excellent grower.

Promise. 46" M. to La. Dec. Fra. $25.00

We have been breeding for a very light yellow with the size and fine rounded form of Medallion. In Promise we have found these traits plus ruffling and a taller better stem. Flowers are broadly open; petals 2 1/4", sepals 1 1/4"; spread near 6". A stunning daylily.

Salmon Bowl. 30". EM. Semi-ev. $15.00

A sister of Party Girl with the same round petal amaryllis form. Large flower of salmon-pink, yellow throat. Salmon Bowl often has extra petals.

Truly Yours. 32" E. to La. semi-ev. $15.00

A full formed flower of light buff overcast and veined with varying tones of pink and salmon. Iridescent effect. Long bloom season and repeat flowering make this an ideal garden subject.

Toy. 18"-24" E. to M. Dec. $5.00

This is the best deep red miniature we have yet developed. Starts early and blooms until midseason. Many buds on wiry stems. Plants small, leaves narrow. Flowers 2" across. A real dwarf miniature.

Whisper Pink. 46" Mla. Dec. $12.50

Lovely very light pink and on fine, rather tall stems. The large flowers have an ivory base tone flushed with delicate pink. Chartreuse throat is green deep down.

BRIDESMAID SEEDLINGS

We have found that our sensational pink 'Bridesmaid' produces similar fine pink tones in its seedlings. We have a number of these which have been marked for color. Since all available plants of Bridesmaid have been taken and it cannot be listed at this time we have decided to offer these seedlings for experimental use. If two plants are ordered we will select one in a deeper shade and one in a lighter tone.

Bridesmaid pink seedlings $5.00 each

BARGAIN STARTER COLLECTIONS

We have small quantities of many fine daylilies purchased for test and observation. Some of these are still rare and offered at high prices. Our interest is primarily in breeding, and we do not plan to augment our sales list. If you want a fine selection of plants for a border, or just to see what the new daylilies are like, send us any amount from $5.00 up and indicate your preferences. We will send correctly labeled plants to double the value of your remittance, our selection. Indicate colors and season preferred. Include Postage.

How to Grow Better Daylilies

The daylily is one of the most easily grown perennials. It will flourish in most any kind of soil, in sun or part shade, and will adapt itself to grein sun or part shade, and will adapt itself to a gre preferences and if you want show flowers here are a few pointers.

Care of Newly Received Plants

If plants can be planted at once, unwrap the plant, remove moss or packing material from roots, wash them off or let stand in water for an hour to refresh the plant and set out. Daylilies may be kept fresh for several days if placed in a pail with water over the roots and stored in a cool, shady place out of doors. It is better to do this than to rush planting before soil is properly prepared.

Where to Plant

Daylilies face away from a background and toward the sun. Place them where they have a wall, fence, hill or shrubbery behind, and all the flowers will look toward you. Put the tallest plants at the back and the shorter ones in the foreground.

Space your daylilies 2' or 3' apart. They will produce their best bloom from two to five year old clumps, so allow space for the clumps to develop.

When to Plant

Plant late blooming sorts in spring, and early blooming varieties in summer or early fall. Daylilies can be moved almost any time, but bloom will not be as fine directly after the plant is moved. It must have time to make new roots and settle down in its new home. Plant evergreen sorts in spring if possible, or not later than early September in the north.

How to Prepare Soil

Daylilies like a friable garden soil made mellow with compost or well rotted manure. Bone meal or Vigoro are good in moderation but avoid too rich a fare, and especially no fresh manure. If the soil is heavy, work in some peat moss, ground sphagnum, leaf mold or sand. Daylilies like plenty of moisture during the flowering season. If your soil is too porous and dries out easily water it copiously during dry spells. However daylilies should not be grown in a boggy place. Spade up the soil at least a foot deep in preparing the bed and leave it finely pulverized.

How to Plant

Dig a hole about 10" deep and 10" across and pulverize the soil. Make a cone of soil in center of hole with point about 1" below surface. Place plant on this with roots extending down and out along sides of cone. Fill in with fine top soil and press down firmly working around roots it necessary. Before completely filling, soak each plant with water. Let drain away and then fill a little above soil level with moist rich dirt. Firm down. The crown where roots and stem meet should be 1" to 2" below the surface. Too deep planting reduces flowering.

When to Divide

When 5 or more years old a daylily clump will have exhausted the soil fertility and flowering will taper off. It is time to dig and divide. Dig the entire clump, wash off the roots, and with a sharp knife, cut into divisions of from 1 to 3 fans, each with a good portion of roots. Many times the clump will pull apart naturally and make symmetrical divisions without cutting. Trim roots to about 5" and tops to about 10". Prepare soil as directed above and replant as separate plants.

Insect Control

Few pests attack daylilies. If thrips are present they may appear on the soft new spring growth of daylilies. If stunting, distortion or falling of leaves begins, spray immediately with an insecticide containing 5% DDT, getting the spray right down into the growing crown of the plant. If several plants show thrip injury it is wise to spray the entire planting.

Yearly Care

In spring clean up all dead leaves and weeds. Sprinkle a small handful of Vigoro around each plant and cultivate in. Compost and bone meal are also good fertilizers. We have found foliage feeding to be effective. Water during dry spells for finest bloom. Keep weeded during summer. In fall cut top growth back to about 8" and mulch lightly with a dry litter if recently planted. Cut off old flower stalks unless you want seed.
